When juvenile Chinook salmon congregate in the San Juan Islands each summer, not all of them are headed for the ocean. Many remain, feeding and growing in the islands for up to three or four years. Resident Chinook, often called Blackmouth for their characteristically dark gums, have long played an important role in the winter diets of orcas and people, but they in recent years their numbers have been falling. What do they eat all winter? Where do they go when they mature? Why are they in decline? Russel Barsh studies the diet and growth hormones of Blackmouth, working in partnership with colleagues at WDFW, NOAA, and Long Live the Kings.

Jennifer Elise Artist Evening

LAVENDERA MASSAGE

285 SPRING ST

FRIDAY HARBOR, WA 98250

07:00 PM - 09:00 PM PST

RICHARD DAVENPORT, 3602986848

LAVENDERAMASSAGE@GMAIL.COM

Lavendera Massage new art is the paintings of Jennifer Elise, Come meet her on Friday Night July 20th at 7 pm to 9 pm.

About the Artist:

Jennifer Elise moved to Friday Harbor seven years ago after living in Nevada, Texas and Arkansas. Her passion for art is rooted in an understanding of the beauty in people and their stories. In her words "A portrait is a biography of the person captured in one moment. Every line, brush stroke, item of clothing or object included in the work has a meaning in the individual's story."

Becoming a professional artist was an unexpected journey for Jennifer. Beginning with a degree in Accounting, a career as an Internal Auditor for a bank; then becoming a "bored housewife" buying a set of paints and reading as much about art and it's beautifully intricate history. Soon neighbors were asking her to do portraits for them. Some even brought up the idea of her putting them up for auction. Eventually taking action on her neighbor's encouragements, Jennifer put her artwork up for auction. Prices for her artwork were set per year by auction value. Portraits at that time were life sized, black and white, charcoal and graphite. Ms. Elise was active with many charities and museums. This included doing a portrait for Oscar De La Hoya and his inner city foundation and a commissioned portrait for Anthony Zuiker, the creator/producer of CSI.

In addition to her work as a commissioned portrait artist, Jennifer has worked as an art instructor teaching at Faith Lutheran School in Summerlin, Las Vegas, private art instruction, and teaching seminars. After moving to Friday Harbor, Jennifer has taken a break from the pressure of commission portraits and has been enjoying creating work that she is inspired to do, rather than told to do. This has opened an exciting new phase of creativity; moving towards mixed media, using some color, and often smaller formats rather than life size.

Most of Jennifer's work is owned by her clients in other parts of the country and is in private homes. It is not often that more than two or three pieces of her work are shown together. In this show you will see a few portraits of individuals in Jennifer's life, along with new artwork of people from a creative side of Jennifer's work. These new creative portraits include a work called "Athena" and a few based on silent film actresses "because they say volumes just with their eyes".

Jewelry is very personal expression.
All selected jewelers work daily in their studio creating work for our personal ornamentation. Each jeweler, in their respective medium; silver, polymer clay, brass or gemstones creates pieces that intrigue our eyes, delight the wearer and allow us, the individual experience a piece of jewelry.

Cathy Schoenberg – Floral Oil paintings

Jo Moniz - Geometric encaustic paintings

These artists share a richly hued color palette: Cathy in oil painting and Jo in encaustic painting.

Cathy's journey to her present floral based work is a very circuitous route, filled with lots of patterning, female figures, dancing figures and cats. Her brilliantly colored paintings are scaled with larger floral shapes belonging to many seemingly familiar flowers.

Jo's architecturally-oriented encaustic paintings are meditations in quiet. Seemingly simplified landscapes of doorways, archways and buildings, her paintings are geometric in nature without feeling cold and formulaic.

Reception for the artists: Friday September 7th 4-7pm.

Please join us on Saturday, September 8th 11-1pm for an informal artist talk and show walk-through.
